

Quality Assurance

Ross Survival places the health and safety of its clients of paramount importance hence the reason we have sought suppliers of the highest calibre, both in quality of product and product knowledge. We deem these to be vital aspects when discussing our range, as inspection, maintenance and certification are vital issues across all of the safety product ranges we supply.

Further to this we operate strictly within industry guidelines to ensure that we are never in breach of any regulations and most importantly our customer and their staff are never at risk.

In 2012 we took steps to formalise our commitment to quality and so underwent the process of writing Quality, Environmental and Occupational Health and Safety management systems. We are proud to say that these were independently accredited to ISO 9001, ISO14001 and OHSAS 18001 in December 2012 and we continue to have annual audits in order to maintain our ISO certification. In addition to this we are registered with FPAL as is the Oil and Gas industry standard.

We operate a policy of 'continual improvement' at all times meaning that we actively seek for better ways to conduct our business and operations. This is not just for the benefit of ourselves though as we believe in driving safety standards higher as a whole and helping to keep the end users safe through innovation and development.
